Coaches and Athletes:

Hanson's Running Shops wants to partner with you in your efforts to be among the best in your sport. We understand the level of commitment and hard work that is required to move ahead and stay at the top. For the past five years, we have developed an elite racing team called the Hanson's Olympic Distance Project which has become a model post-collegiate training program that is helping to put American distance running on the rise at the national and international levels. With that commitment and competitive attitude in mind, you can see why we understand what it takes to reach the highest levels of competition in your sport as well.

Helping athletes reach high levels of success with running shoes for speed and endurance training!

How can athletes benefit from a specialty running shop like Hanson's? First of all, we know that great programs and athletes do the extra work to excel. We've seen that speed and endurance training has become one of the key factors in moving ahead and thriving in your sport. As runners ourselves, along with our extensive experience working with track athletes, we understand training activities such as plyometrics, speed-quickness-agility drills, and aerobic conditioning runs. More importantly, we know the additional physical demands and risks that these training activities place on athletes.

Success in your sport is too important to risk injury because of the wrong type of running shoes!

At Hanson's, we want to help your speed and endurance training program be successful by fitting you in the correct type of running shoe in order to prevent injury and maximize performance. Not all running shoes are the same and we have the expertise to help you find the proper running shoes with quality cushioning and support that your foot and biomechanics require.
